Vision

From the lifestyle advantages afforded by our natural assets and outdoor amenities, to a low cost of living, outstanding public schools, a distinguished regional university, an innovative health care sector, and robust technology infrastructure, Johnson City holds the keys to its future – a future in which we retain and attract the best and brightest people and industries and work together toward a shared vision so all our citizens can experience prosperity.

Strategic Plan

01 Economic Vitality

We must remain focused on our goal to move Johnson City forward through a strategic and intentional focus on economic growth, while creatively managing current external forces on the economy. Supporting our educational systems is critical to economic vitality.

02 Quality of Place

Johnson City has much to offer, not only from an economic development standpoint but also from the excellent educational systems, health care, and recreational amenities available in the community.

03 Future Ready Infrastructure

We must have the proper infrastructure to encourage investment in the new economy and be prepared for growth.

04 Excellence in City Government

Johnson City government must remain focused on effective and efficient operations and create a business and citizenry friendly environment.
Community

Johnson City (population 72,514) is one of the Tennessee/Virginia Tri-Cities along with Kingsport and Bristol (combined statistical area population 510,400). The city spans 43 square miles and is the eighth-largest city in Tennessee. Nestled in the foothills of the scenic Appalachian Mountains in Washington County, this thriving urban community has consistently ranked as one of the nation's best and most popular small metro areas boasting an affordable cost of living, no state income tax, and outstanding schools, parks, sports, and fitness facilities. The city is directly accessible from interstates 26 and 81 and is a short drive to access commercial air service at the Tri-Cities Airport (TRI).

Amenities

As a regional hub in a four-state area, the community boasts a variety of retail businesses, from well-known national chains to local boutiques and galleries. Entertainment and dining options abound, with Johnson City serving as the Tri-Cities area destination for retail, dining, entertainment, and leisure options. Annual community events include the Blue Plum Festival, Meet the Mountains, Umoja Unity Festival, and Candy Land Christmas. The community recently opened a 1,200-seat fine arts center that further expands area cultural and theater offerings, including an annual Broadway series. Recreational opportunities are plentiful in the region's mountains and lakes, including climbing, hiking, skiing, whitewater rafting, boating, fishing, and golfing. Popular biking and hiking trails include the 10-mile Tweetsie Trail that connects Johnson City to Elizabethton. The Tannery Knobs Mountain Bike Park is the newest trail system just off the interstate and a half-mile from downtown Johnson City's breweries, shops, and restaurants. The park includes numerous off-road bike trails and an asphalt pump track that offers fun for all ages and skill levels. For more panoramic views, the 725-acre Buffalo Mountain Park features nearly nine miles of trails, with White Rock, Tip Top, and Huckleberry Knob offering the best majestic overlooks.

Education

The Johnson City School System provides Pre-K through grade 12 education to more than 8,000 students on 11 campuses. Johnson City Schools are consistently above state and national averages for the ACT, SAT, and state test scores with Science Hill High School currently ranked within Tennessee's top ten schools. Although a component unit and part of the City’s Annual Budget, the Johnson City Public School System is governed by an elected seven-member School Board who appoint a Superintendent to run the day-to-day operations of the district. The City owns all of the School facilities and provides student transit services. Johnson City is also the home of East Tennessee State University (ETSU), which has an enrollment of approximately 15,000 students. Other higher educational institutions include Milligan University and Northeast State Community College.

Healthcare

Medical services are provided by Ballad Health, which operates Johnson City Medical Center (a Level 1 Trauma Center) and Niswonger Children's Hospital; ETSU's Quillen College of Medicine, the Bill Gatton College of Pharmacy, and the James H. Quillen Veterans Affairs Medical Center. Collectively, these healthcare interests have created a dynamic Med-Tech Corridor that attracts both talent and investment.

Economics

Major employers include Ballad Health, East Tennessee State University and Veterans Affairs Medical Center. Johnson City has a diverse manufacturing base that includes A.O. Smith Corporation (a world leading manufacturer of residential and commercial water heaters and boilers), Crown Laboratories, (a skincare/beauty company that produces Blue Lizard Australian Sunscreen), and the area is recognized as a leader in aerospace engineering. Johnson City's median household income is $54,217 with a median home value of $266,750.

Technology

Johnson City is a 10-gig (upload/download) Smart City. Area economic development agencies offer programs with financial incentives for individuals who choose to relocate to the area to start their businesses.
Johnson City is recognized as an ideal place to live, work, and play. Its historic architecture is authentic, and the open space is breathtaking. Residents enjoy living in such beauty that many seek as a vacation spot. The setting also provides an opportunity for immediate adventure or contemplative relaxation, both of which define the quality of life. People are drawn to this university community for the energy of youth and the mental agility of lifelong learning among the exchange of many perspectives and ideas. Johnson City is also known as a community of opportunity while maintaining a welcoming, supportive, small-town atmosphere. People here help build minds, memories, ideas, connections, and businesses. It is a place where ideas get put to work.
Growth

The Johnson City area has seen considerable growth in recent years with no signs of slowing. With minimal growth across much of the state, the 2020 Census reflected 12.5 percent growth in Johnson City. Managing this boom is at the forefront of everything management and elected leadership undertakes.

The City’s outstanding service provision, low tax rate and proximity to amenities make it highly desirable for residents and businesses. The organization recently increased its Development Services and Economic Development staff to help address related needs including developing Horizon 2045, the City’s growth management plan. This plan will be used as a framework over the next 20+ years to guide decisions related to important topics such as development, investments in infrastructure, zoning, and preservation of the community’s unique character.

Every street, every track, every trail in Johnson City bears the mark of generations who have come before.

In the 1850s, Henry Johnson, postmaster of Blue Plum, saw an opportunity. Before the East Tennessee & Virginia Railway moved a single train through the mountains, Johnson set up shop directly in its path, anticipating the hustle and bustle brought on by a new mode of transportation. Soon, Johnson’s Depot grew from a store and post office to the hub of Northeast Tennessee. Johnson was the first in a line of entrepreneurs who made the railroad central to everyday life in Johnson City. Meanwhile, the city and its residents bore the weight of every boom and bust, but by 1909, it had three rail lines crisscrossing through the heart of downtown. Though the age of the railroad has passed, we hold tight to its visible, tangible history. Former train depots have been rejuvenated and once again filled with activity and community. The Tweetsie Trail leads runners, hikers, and bikers to Elizabethton with the same regularity of the eponymous engine’s iconic whistle that echoed through the mountains. And each year, the Blue Plum Festival pays homage to our founder in spirit and in name, bringing us together just as his depot did.
The City of Johnson City operates under a Commission-Manager form of government with a Mayor and four City Commissioners all elected on a staggered, non-partisan basis, with the next municipal election for three Commissioners scheduled in November 2024. The Mayor and Vice Mayor are chosen among the City Commission Members following each election. The City Commission approves the annual municipal budget; establishes policies, goals, and objectives to direct the City’s growth and development; and adopts ordinances, rules, and regulations as necessary for the general welfare of the community and its visitors.

Johnson City provides a full array of municipal services supported by roughly 1,000 full- and part-time employees with an additional 150-200 temporary seasonal employees. The City’s Fiscal Year 2024 Budget (which includes the City School budget) is approximately $325 million, supported through a combined state, county, and city 2021 total sales tax rate of 9.5% and a combined property tax rate of $4.13 ($1.98 for City and $2.15 County) per $100 of assessed value.
